Questar Gas asks Wyoming PSC to increase natural gas rates by $1.3 million

SALT LAKE CITY — Questar Gas is requesting an increase of $1.3 million in its Wyoming natural gas rates. If the request is approved by the Wyoming Public Service Commission (PSC), the monthly bill for the typical residential customer will increase by about $2.38 beginning Nov. 1, 2016.

“Market prices rose slightly in recent months,” said Colleen Larkin Bell, Questar Gas vice president and general manager. “As a result, we’re paying slightly more for natural gas and passing the costs on to customers. We hope to see the trend of stable rates continue; however, prices can fluctuate with changes in supply and demand.”

The request includes the company's regular gas-cost-adjustment filing to cover costs of buying natural gas for its customers. These costs are passed on to customers with no markup and have no impact on the utility's profits. The "pass-on" adjustments simply enable the company to change rates to reflect changes in gas-supply and other costs.

Bell also reminded Questar Gas customers that funds may be available to help income-eligible customers who are elderly or disabled pay their gas bills through Wyoming’s LIEAP program and Questar Gas’s Energy Share of Wyoming program, which is funded by donations from Questar customers, employees and shareholders.
